

Town &amp; Country

ESTABLISHED IN 1846

PARTIES

A stroll at Treasure Hill Farm, owned by Bob and Jane Harrison, in South Kent, Connecticut.

South Kent, CT

Weantinoge Heritage Land Trust

Cochair Carelyne Roehm mingling.

Country Life

Art-world wunderkind Scott Rothkopf, a curator at New York's Whitney Museum, attended the Weantinoge Heritage Land Trust benefit in Connecticut. We asked him... What did you enjoy most about the event? The impassioned talk given by the trust's resident ecologist, Harry White. The organization understands that preservation is more than buying land. It also involves active stewardship to protect the flora and the animal population. What are you looking forward to this fall culturally? In October, the Whitney will premiere a retrospective of the work of Paul Thek, who was one of the most interesting and radical figures in the 1960s. At the movies, I can't wait to see Lena Dunham's film Tiny Furniture. She is the daughter of artists Carroll Dunham and Laurie Simmons.

Scott Rothkopf and Jerry Saltz.

Nick Ponder.

Joan Hinchman and George Massey.

Lynn Nesbit.

A pool with a view.

Honorary chairs Anne Bass and William Rondina.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WENDY CARLSON